WASHINGTON CITY:

TITISDAY November 12, 1872. It is some consolation to know that the latest reports of the conflagration in Boston are less discouraging than could have been hoped for from the first dispatches. 'Tis true that sixtyfour acres in the heart of the city have been swept by the flames, and nine hundred buildings destroyed, at least one-balf of them of marble and granite, among the finest in Boston, erected only five years ago, when the streets were widened; that the burning of these buildings and their valuable contents is a clear loss, at the lowest calculation, of $80,000,000; and that by the disaster 300 families have been made homeless; but there was not such a fearful loss of human life as in Chicago, and the fire is not so great a loss in a pecuniary point of view as the Chicago conflagration, while it was the bitter fate of thousands in that city to be homeless for weeks. The Boston fire is mainly a reduction in wealth, and every man or woman who buys shoes or clothing will have to share a portion of the loss. Then, again, while many of the structures destroyed were justly the pride of Boston, yet for tunately the best part of the modern Athens, its stores of antiquity and learning, and its historical relics are safe. Then, again, calamity gives the city a chance to lay out its streets straighter and wider-had they been wider at first no such a conflagration would have been possible-and in a year or two the burnt district, like those in Portland, Richmond, and Chicago, wiil doubtless be the most beautiful and finely improved portion of the Hub. Already a meeting of the enterprising citizens has been held, with a view to laying out new streets in the burnt district, and already some of these same citizens are looking for materials to rebuild. In a year or two the Bostonians, like the Chicagoans, may come to regard the fire as a blessing in disguise, erect a monument on the corner where it started, and hold a ball to celebrate the event. To

The mansard roof is catching it from all quarters as responsible for the great fires in Chicago and Boston. This may be partially true in view of the construction of the mansard roof in this country, where, as has been aptly described, it is little else than a lumber yard on the top of a house. But mansard roofs, properly constructed with frame work of iron and covering of slate, and all the materials fire-proofas proposed in the new State Department building-are quite as safe as any other roof. While the mansard should receive thorough criticism for all its defects, it will not do to make it the scapegoat for other defective points in modern buildings. Our dwelling houses-even those that appear the most substantial-have for the most part weak points about them. Among those is the wooden window frame; the interior, the studding, lath and plaster; the wooden stairways, &c., which not only carry the fire from story to story, but furnish a fine to increase the flames. The rage for fancy woods for interior decorations, the amount of wainscoting, large footboards, heavy wooden trimmings around doors and windows. outside cornices and bay-windows now in use, must bear their share of responsibility. In fact, a very wide field of investigation is opened when we come to recken the various defective points of medern house-building. Houses of this class are well-described as "wooden houses with stone

The new code of laws for the District of Columbia will come before Congress this winter for approval or rejection. The act creating the commission provided that the new code should receive the sanction of Congress, and it would have to be submitted to that body anyhow, for the reason that the codifying commissioners, in the discharge of their duty, deemed it highly desirable not only that a digest of existing District laws should be framed, but that modifications of certain United States statutes should be made. This they did. The codification has been well and carefully done, and is not likely therefore, to be amended. It will not probably be read to Congress except by title, as its read ing from the Clerk's desk would require nearly a'l the sessions of a week. Congress will thus be compelled to rely mainly on the recommendation of the committee that examines the new code. Should Congress consider the new code favorably, a bill of one section approving it

The Eastern railroad, which runs from Bosten to Portland, takes the lead in trying the cheap train experiment, and has put on trains between Boston and Lynn which carry passengers between the two cities-a distance of ten miles-for five cents! These trains run morning and evening, and are mainly intended to accommodate the workingmen and business men of Boston who live in the suburban towns and villages and at Lynn. Twenty tickets are sold for a dollar, and, as on the horse cars, the fare is uniform between any of the stations. Such an arrangement will have a wonderful effect in building up the suburbs of a city, and we hope, as the railroad facilities of Washington multiply, that the experiment of cheap trains will be tried in this section.

Reform in New York is not to stop, it seems, at the breaking up of the corrupt rings of publie plunderers, but the minor swindlers in that city are also being looked after sharply. The proprieter of a so-called Broadway gift concert was arrested yesterday and locked up in the station-house. This is a move in the right direction, and another hopeful sign of the times.

Baltimore is in trouble about her scant supply of water, and the authorities now have under consideration a plan by which a permanent adequate water supply can be secured at a cost of three and one half million dollars, and two plans for temporary supplies until the completion of the permanent work at respective costs UT $700,000 and $380,000.

The New York Sun comes to the conclusion that "the only perfect protection of a city from fire seems to be the adoption of a system of wide streets and the isolation of great warehouses." We have the wide streets, at least.

It is stated on authority that Mr. Frederick Douglass is neither urging the appointment of Mr. Langston nor anybody else for any position. Neither is he in search of office for himself.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL. It is fortunate, at least so far as immediate ffects are concerned, that the sad news of the Boston confiagration reached New York on Sunday, so that a day's reflection could intervene before business began. Had the blow come more suddenly, a disastrous and wide spread panis might have followed immediately. As it is, business men had time to recover their presence of mind and to make a considerate survey of the situation. The London money market is stringent, the minimum discount rate market is stringent, the minimum discount rate of the Bank of England being 7 per cent., which is considered a panic rate. If there is to be trouble, which, however, can be averted by wise and firm action, it is the opinion of cool heads that the trouble will come rather from the foreign markets than from the Boston fire. There are good reasons, however, to believe that every means will be used by the Treasury keis, and that the worst is past. Government Securities. Jay Cooke & Co. furnish the following to-day:
